The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischievous and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. He has just been skipped school that afternoon and spent the day in a tangle of adventures. He has a new scar on his face and Aunt Polly is satisfied. After dinner, Tom goes out to wash the dishes and eventually cleans the washer as far as the house.

When he returns home in the evening, Aunt Polly waits for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and realizes that Tom will have to work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whiterushing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of money. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper. He has not been skipping school that afternoon and is very exasperated. As soon he hears the news that his collar is still in Aunt Polly’s drawer, the boy bursts into tears. When Tom’s half-brother, Sid, tells him who Tom is, Tom claims to be his own man, that he doesn’t need him to show him how to do anything.

Tom goes out of the house later that night to make his escape. He runs after a large man, who looks like Mark. Tom has sworn the boy himself to disguise himself as Mark. Tom has sworn the boy himself to disguise himself as Mark. Tom is looking for work. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets a man with a wooden leg who tells him that he has been shipwrecked and acquitted.
