The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper to find his quilt on his bed, which means he has been skipped school that afternoon and must now work. Aunt Polly has done all she can about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom that he must be back in school the next day. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom is not. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, is there, and Tom’s plan is to make himself disagreeable to Aunt Polly so that she will send him to the almshouse. Tom goes out of the house to do this. He meets Ben Whitney, a wastrel, and they wander the streets of St. Petersburg, weaving and gabbing. Tom sits in the almshouse and eventually chooses the new room of the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom tries his best, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mantle. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper, with a new friend who has been playing truant from school all day. While Tom and his friend are playing a game of marbles, Aunt Polly tells Tom that he will not be skipped school that afternoon and must return to school the next day. Tom is very disappointed and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.
