The Treaty Of Lisbon And The Future Of European Law And Policy
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper in a huff, full of stories of his adventures. During supper, Aunt I love to hear him talk. "I've been to sea," he says, trying to sound important, "and I've been into the woods and seen things that you wouldn't believe!"

Aunt Polly is satisfied. She's always been proud of Tom and his adventures. He's a bright boy and shows hints that he still has his aunt's eyes.

Tom goes out of the house to light a match. He's read about how matches can start fires and decides to light one. But just as he lights it, a gust of wind comes along and extinguishes the flame.

The Treaty of Lisbon of the European Union. It was approved by referendum on 2 October 2009 (sometimes known as the second Lisbon referendum).

The European Union is based on the rule of law. This means that every action taken by the EU is founded on treaties that have been approved voluntarily and democratically by all EU member countries. For example, if a policy area is not cited in a treaty, the Commission cannot propose a law in that area.
